Parents Experiencing Financial Difficulty

A central element in 'God's mysteries' is God's boundless concern for the poor. The College is charged with balancing the need to respect and include the poor with the responsibility to manage school resources effectively to achieve the mission of the school community. Consequently the level of fees charged takes into account the needs of the school and the capacity of the community to pay. Catholic schools are charged with the responsibility to make themselves as accessible as possible to all in our communities who desire a Catholic education. Families who find the financial burden difficult should consult with the Principal or their Parish Priest before deciding to preclude their children from Catholic Education on financial grounds.
